LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT

To the Eastern Community,

As I write my final letter to you as President of Eastern Oklahoma State College, I find myself reflecting on all that we've accomplished together. From the construction of new dormitories and the growth in funding and donations, to the significant strides we've made in addressing deferred maintenance—these achievements represent important milestones in our college's continued growth.

But more than the projects and progress, I am thinking about the people. I'm grateful for the dedicated colleagues and friends I've had the privilege to work alongside. I'm inspired by the students who pass through our doors, each bringing their hopes and dreams as they work toward brighter futures. And I'm thankful for the unwavering support of community members and partners who believe in Eastern's mission and have joined us in strengthening this institution.

Serving as President of Eastern has truly been the honor of my life. I will deeply miss being part of your daily lives and the important work we do together. I leave with immense pride in what we've built—and with full confidence in the future of this remarkable college.

Thank you, from the bottom of my heart. I wish you all continued success and fulfillment in the journey ahead.

Warmest regards,

Dr. Janet Wansick

Pfeiffer Brings Life-Long Experience to Eastern Farm Advisory Board

For John H. Pfeiffer Jr., agriculture is more than a career. It is a way of life that began generations before him and one he is helping shape for future students through his service on Eastern Oklahoma State College's Agricultural Advisory Board.

Pfeiffer, a fourth-generation Angus cattle producer from the small Oklahoma towns of Mulhall and Orlando, was inducted into the Oklahoma Agriculture Hall of Fame in 2025. The honor recognized not only his lifelong dedication to the industry, but also his leadership at the state and national levels. Today, that same commitment guides his work with Eastern.

"I was born in agriculture," Pfeiffer said. "My great-grandparents came to Oklahoma the day after the Land Run in 1889. They bought their first farm for $20 and a shotgun. We've lived in and raised Angus cattle in that same area ever since."

Pfeiffer represents the fourth generation in his family's operation, which now farms more than 3,000 acres and runs over 300 mother cows. His son is the fifth generation. A grandson may be the sixth.

While his own roots run deep in north-central Oklahoma, his involvement with Eastern's advisory board is relatively new. Pfeiffer joined the board in 2024 at the invitation of Dr. Randy Harp, a longtime friend and fellow Oklahoma State University alumnus, who now serves as Eastern's president.

"Randy and I were roommates in college," Pfeiffer said. "When he came to Eastern, he called and asked what it would take to get me involved. He mentioned it would just be a couple of meetings a year—which might've been a bit of a stretch—but I didn't want to tell him no."

Since his first visit to Wilburton, Pfeiffer has been impressed by the college's commitment to revitalizing its agricultural operations.

"They've really taken ownership," he said. "They're fixing fences, cleaning things up, getting things back in place. One of the first meetings I was in, someone said, 'We think we own 4,000 acres, but we're not really sure.' Now, they're working to identify and improve that land."

Pfeiffer points to the return of Eastern's stocker cattle program as an example of that progress. The hands-on experience the program provides, he said, is critical for training a new generation of producers and ag professionals.

"Agriculture isn't the same as it was in my grandfather's or even my father's day," he said. "You have to be willing to change. That's where education comes in."

Pfeiffer earned his animal science degree from OSU after a short-lived plan to become a dentist. He judged livestock and was involved in numerous ag-related activities during college before returning home to farm. Along the way, he also spent three decades in public education—including a stint as a high school principal—and served on numerous boards, including as president of the American Angus Association and chair of the Certified Angus Beef Board.

That wide-ranging experience, Pfeiffer believes, allows him to bring a unique perspective to Eastern's advisory board. He said his background in production, education, policy and marketing has given him a broad understanding of the agricultural industry, which he believes helps him offer valuable insight as the college works to prepare students for future careers.

Leadership is about more than just sharing knowledge, Pfeiffer said. It's about showing up.

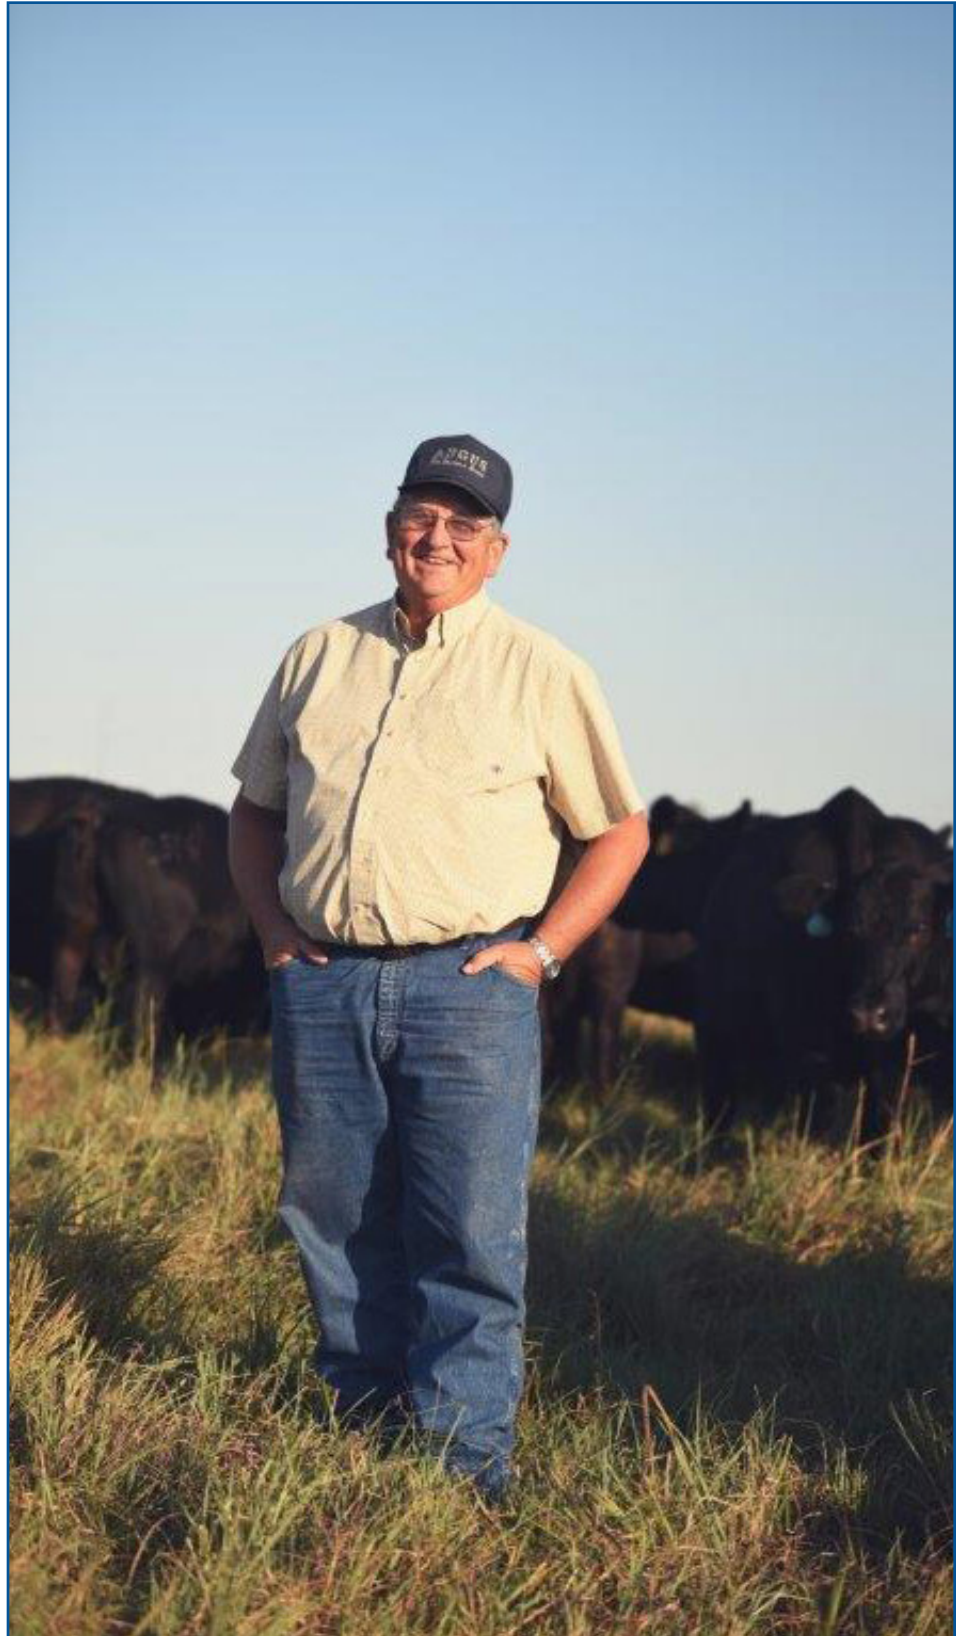

"In any industry—agriculture, education, whatever—you have to give back to it if you want to be part of it," he said. "That means stepping into places that may not be easy and taking the time to be there. If students can learn that early, they're already on their way."

As Eastern continues to rebuild its agricultural foundation, Pfeiffer sees an opportunity for the college to not only serve local students, but also to act as a pipeline for those who may later attend four-year universities or enter the workforce directly.

"There's no reason why a student from out of state couldn't come to Eastern, get a strong foundation, and then go on to Oklahoma State," he said. "But there's also a real demand for people who want to work in the stocker cattle industry right now. If we can train students for those jobs, they'll have opportunities—and they'll get paid for the work they do."

For Pfeiffer, it all comes back to a belief in the value of agricultural education and the responsibility of each generation to prepare the next.

"You have to be trained to know what works for you," he said. "Tradition still matters, but you also have to be ready to adapt. And if we can help students learn that here, then we've done something right." E

News Release: Eastern Oklahoma State College Commits to Fifth Consecutive Year Without Tuition Increase

WILBURTON, Oklahoma — Eastern Oklahoma State College has announced its decision to maintain its current tuition rates for the upcoming academic year, marking the fifth consecutive year without a tuition increase. With this commitment, Eastern reaffirmed its dedication to providing accessible and affordable higher education opportunities to students across the region.

Eastern President Dr. Janet Wansick noted that over the years, Eastern has made considerable efforts to ensure that the cost of a college degree remains within reach for students. Eastern's last tuition increase, a modest 4.3 percent, occurred during the 2020-2021 academic year. The current tuition and mandatory fee rate is $158.90 per credit hour. This rate has remained unchanged since Wansick assumed her presidency, reinforcing Eastern's commitment to provide student access to higher education.

"Our top priority is helping students reach their educational goals," said President Janet Wansick. "We recognize the financial pressures many of our students face, and by holding tuition steady for the fifth consecutive year, we aim to ease that burden and keep college accessible. I'm proud that during my time at Eastern, we haven't increased tuition and have even reduced some fees. Our commitment remains focused on supporting our students every step of the way and helping them realize their full potential."

Under Wansick's leadership, Eastern has implemented numerous initiatives to support student success, support faculty and staff, and enhance the overall college experience. These efforts include expanding scholarship opportunities, investing in academic resources and housing facilities, and providing comprehensive support services. By prioritizing these initiatives, Eastern aims to create a dynamic learning environment that empowers students to excel both academically and personally. E

News Release: Eastern to Host Fifth Native Americans Who Code Summer Camp

WILBURTON, Oklahoma — Eastern Oklahoma State College generated a total of $70.17 million in economic output and supported a total of 672 jobs with wages of $29.69 million in the State of Oklahoma in fiscal year 2024, according to an economic analysis conducted by the University of Cincinnati Economics Center.

Eastern received a total of $6.33 million in appropriations from the Oklahoma Legislature in fiscal year 2024. This means that every $1 in state appropriations resulted in $11.09 in total economic output in the State of Oklahoma in fiscal year 2024.

"I'm thrilled with the findings of the recent economic impact study, which reveals that every dollar invested in Eastern Oklahoma State College generates a return of more than eleven dollars," said EOSC President Dr. Janet Wansick. "This confirms what we've long known—Eastern is not just an educational institution, but a vital economic engine for our region. We're proud to be a strong partner in supporting our community's growth and prosperity."

The operations, student spending, and alumni of Eastern created a total of $2.06 million in fiscal benefits for state and local jurisdictions in fiscal year 2024, which is comprised of $1.06 million in income tax revenue and $996,420 in sales tax revenue.

The Oklahoma state system of higher education, comprised of 25 public colleges and universities, contributed $14.61 billion to the state's economy in FY24, directly and indirectly supported over 111,000 jobs, and generated $461.8 million in tax revenue for state, county, and local governments, according to a recent economic impact study. Every dollar of state appropriations invested in our state system colleges and universities yields $17.48 in economic output, demonstrating a substantial return on investment for Oklahoma taxpayers.

The Oklahoma State Regents for Higher Education contracted with the University of Cincinnati Economics Center to analyze the economic contribution of higher education in Oklahoma. The comprehensive report evaluates educational attainment levels across Oklahoma; quantifies the economic and fiscal impact of public institutions; examines postsecondary employment outcomes of graduates; assesses the community benefits generated by students, faculty and staff; and quantifies the impact of the Oklahoma's Promise scholarship program.

"The State Regents and our public colleges and universities remain focused on producing successful graduates that fulfill Oklahoma's evolving workforce needs," said State Regents' chair Dennis Casey. "The $14.61 billion total economic impact of our state system clearly shows that public higher education is integral to Oklahoma's continued economic growth."

The number of Oklahomans age 25 and older with an associate degree or higher increased from 31.0% to 36.1% over the last 10 years. The study showed that median annual earnings increase as degree level advances. Five years after completing a degree, median wages for individuals with associate degrees were $53,503; bachelor's degrees, $57,336; master's degrees, $67,270; doctorates, $77,834; and first professional degrees, $118,977.

The study also found that 93.7% of resident undergraduates were employed in Oklahoma one year after graduation, and notably, that 61.3% of non-resident graduates stayed and entered the Oklahoma workforce. Our public colleges and universities are not only engaging and preparing local talent, but also helping to attract and retain talent from outside the state.

"Oklahoma's public institutions play a crucial role in shaping the workforce, driving innovation, and advancing economic development," said Chancellor Sean Burrage. "Our Blueprint 2030 strategic plan prioritizes aligning academic programs to meet employment needs, with the goal to produce more educators, engineers, computer scientists, and nurses."

Beyond the classroom, students dedicated 3.78 million hours across all educational activities, reinforcing their key role in experiential learning, internships, clinical services, and service-based programs. Students, staff, and faculty volunteered a total of 355,112 hours during the 2023-24 academic year. The total economic value of these volunteer efforts is estimated at $10.88 million.

The study also found that every dollar invested in the Oklahoma's Promise scholarship program generates $5.88 in economic output. Employment outcomes data show the vast majority of Oklahoma's Promise recipients remain and work in the state after graduation. More than 94% of Oklahoma's Promise graduates were employed in Oklahoma one year after graduation, and 86% were still employed here five years after graduation.

Recognized by many as one of the top promise scholarship programs in the nation, Oklahoma's Promise is considered a national model that emphasizes both academic preparation and financial support for college. More than 115,000 students have earned college tuition scholarships through Oklahoma's Promise since the program's inception.
